How Long Till Dawn: Memoirs of One of the Charter Members and Original Founders of the Resistance Movement in Algiers and a Member of OSS Daphne Joan Fry Tuyl Knox
Memoirs Of A Spy... Although cut off from all funds prior to June 1940 and with the added handicap of having to provide for two small boys and her widowed mother, Joan Knox was one of the charter members and original founders of the resistance movement in Algeria. Her network set up the first practical radio contact with Gibraltar and London. It was in this capacity that she met her future second husband, John Crawford Knox, an OSS agent (one of FDR's 12 Apostles) who was gathering information in preparation of the British and U.S. landings in North Africa. After the Allied landings in November 1942, she became a member of OSS, serving for that Agency in the Joint Intelligence Collecting Agency (JICA) and in branches of Psychological Warfare for some two years. Her memoirs have been quoted in several books, most notably in Hal Vaughan's FDR'S 12 Apostles and British historian Ian Dear's Spy and Counter-Spy: Espionage during the Second World War.
